Highlands Hospital Regional Center for Autism (HHRCA) is honored to offer autism services in affiliation with Cleveland Clinic Children’s Hospital’s Center for Autism.

Our licensed private school is modeled after Cleveland Clinic’s esteemed Lerner School. HHRCA provides families and children in Southwestern Pennsylvania with state-of-the-art educational and behavioral treatment. The program model to which we adhere has shown sterling documented positive outcomes in educational, medical, and behavioral programming. Intensive treatment through the exclusive use of ABA offers our students the highest possibility for success.

2014 was an exceptional year for the Community Foundation of Fayette County! Our assets have grown to approximately $15 million, and we now hold over 140 funds. Many new funds were created this year. We started a new matching gifts program, wherein we match $1 for every $3 we receive for permanent funds, and this has provided great growth by increasing our family of permanent funds. Clara L. Pascoe returned as executive director (a position she held from 2006 through 2012), and we were happy to welcome her back!

Since our beginning in 1999, we have awarded over $3.5 million in support to local and regional non-profits. We broke records in the amount of scholarships and tuition assistance we awarded in 2014 to Fayette County students in grades pre-K to college, with a total of $178,583 in support. These awards were made through our scholarship Funds (college), as well as through our participation in PA’s Educational Improvement Tax Credit (EITC) Program (for grades Pre-K to 12).
We provide professional service to our donors by helping them to maximize the benefits of their giving with intelligent investment guidance and immediate tax benefits. Our strength is based on dramatic asset growth, comprehensive donor services, strategic grantmaking, and everyday assistance to our donors and the non-profit community. We received accreditation from the Council on Foundations in 2009, with re-accreditation this year. There are over 750 community foundations in the nation, and not all have earned national accreditation, as we have. This honor indicates that we follow and apply the strict professional standards and practices of the Council on Foundations and the IRS. We are proud to have attained this recognition.

The Community Foundation of Fayette County stands as an excellent example of how a small, civic minded organization can make a significant difference both locally and regionally. I am happy to have had the opportunity to serve as Chairman, and I look forward to continuing my involvement with this amazing group.

Sincerely,
Jim Foutz

The Community Foundation of Fayette County (CFFC) was founded in 1999 by a group of community leaders including John Buchanon, Charles Cluss, Lee Frankhouser, Albert Skomra, Lynda Waggoner, the late philanthropist, Robert Eberly, Sr., and three of this region’s largest foundations – the Claude Worthington Benedum Foundation, the Richard King Mellon Foundation, and the McCune Foundation. It was their intent to create a charitable Foundation with a focus on Fayette County, in order to improve and enrich the quality of life for all residents and to assist the County's non-profit sector.

The Foundation has grown since 1999, and our mission has expanded. We are leaders in the community and region and bring donors together to respond to regional, as well as local needs. Our funding base has expanded as well. The CFFC now holds over 140 funds, approximately $15 million in assets and continues to grow. The CFFC is led by a volunteer Board of Directors, with many having started their own Funds here to aid in their charitable giving. Daily operations are managed by a professional, local staff, with decades of experience in non-profit management and development.

In 2009, the CFFC was named the Outstanding Foundation in Western Pennsylvania by the Association of Fundraising Professionals and first received National Accreditation from the Council on Foundations. In 2014, the Foundation received re-accreditation. As an accredited Foundation, the CFFC follows and applies strict professional standards and practices. As you read this report, we hope you are inspired to become involved in charitable giving on some level, large or small, alone or with a group, but to make a difference. Anyone can be a philanthropist!

If you would like to learn more about how you can create a Fund, please contact the CFFC at 724-437-8600, visit our website at www.cffayettepa.org or stop in the office at 2 West Main Street, Suite 101, Uniontown, PA.

CFFC Vision
Fayette County has a vibrant infrastructure and is prospering from a renewed economic and social reinvention. The Community Foundation of Fayette County’s commitment to community philanthropy guides our charitable focus and provides for a healthy and prosperous Fayette County.

“When you give, you begin to live!”
You Might Die Trying, The Dave Matthews Band
By Erin Hayes
For the Herald-Standard

Describing himself as a very spiritual man, Mike Wood says he has been blessed in his life. He is blessed to be a successful businessman, the employer of many fine folks, and the father of two wonderful children -- none of which would have been possible without first having been blessed by having had his wife Mary Jane in his life.

Wood also believes in giving back to the community. And that’s why the owner of four successful car dealerships decided to donate to the Community Foundation of Fayette County (CFFC) this year to establish a memorial scholarship in his wife’s name.

“She was the most upbeat and selfless person I have ever met, and the most positive influence in my life,” Wood said of his wife, Mary Jane Wood, who perished in an auto accident last year.

“Nov. 19 at 10 a.m., that was the worst day of my life,” he said of learning that another vehicle had crashed head-on into his wife’s Toyota after crossing a median on I-79 in Morgantown, W.Va.

“I would not even be in car sales if it weren’t for her. She was the kind of person who could look you in the eye and say, ‘You can do this,’” he added of the success he has enjoyed as a result of her inspiration. “Obviously, she is the most important person I’ve ever had in my life. Everybody loved her.”

She taught Sunday school and even cleaned the dealership bathrooms the Sunday before she died. She loved helping out, despite repeated reminders that she didn’t need to do so, Wood said during an interview at his new, recently-opened Mike Wood Toyota facility in Uniontown. “It’s the first new Toyota facility in 26 years. It’s a state-of-the facility,” he said of the relocated dealership which employs more than 30 sales representatives and support staff.

Especially meaningful is that he was able to name a private drive to the new facility, located at 1 Mary Jane Wood Dr., in memory of his wife, also.

“I’m a spiritual man and I believe that I’m here for a reason. I am grateful for my employees, for the outpouring support from the community, and I’m grateful for my ability to give back to the community and give some deserving person a helping hand up,” he said.

This year, CFFC, dispersed more than $150,000 in scholarships to Fayette County students -- the largest amount to date, due to the generosity of local donors.

“Our scholarship funds have been created by generous donors for a variety of reasons,” said Jim Foutz, CFFC board chairman at a recent mixer held to recognize donors and award recipients. “Some were initiated to honor or memorialize a loved one. Others were created because they want to give back to Fayette County residents. Whatever their reasons, they have all realized the importance of postsecondary education.”

CFFC Helps Connellsville Redevelopment Authority achieve its mission.

By Erin Hayes
For the Herald-Standard

It’s through partnerships that the Connellsville Redevelopment Authority is able to achieve its mission of improving the quality of life for residents and encourage community and economic development.

One of the authority’s partnerships is the Community Foundation of Fayette County, through which it receives funding for various projects.

“We rely on various funding, but the CFFC is often the first to respond to grant requests because of their familiarity with the community,” said Michael Edwards, who came on board with the authority as executive director in 2008.

Since its inception 30 years ago, the authority has worked on a long list of programs to create playgrounds, establish free health clinics, contribute to food banks, and work to address blight in town. Perhaps its greatest achievement is reducing the number of empty storefronts in the downtown area -- down from a 25 percent vacancy rate a decade ago to close to just five percent today.

“We’ve been very involved in downtown development and we’ve been able... to see a lot of new businesses come into the city,” said Edwards of strategies implemented and programs created since 2008 “Right now, it is difficult to find open space or rental property for new businesses.”

Along with his assistant, Paula Grubach, who has 22 years of working in the community development field, they have secured close to $600,000 in funding with another $400,000 pending approval so far this year.

“She knows the community and she knows the programs. She’s a very important part of what’s accomplished here,” he said.

“Downtown is flourishing just in the last few years, but more so in the last five years. Our Westside has flourished significantly,” Grubach said.

Perhaps one of the authority’s most significant “miracle stories” -- and a standing testament to what can be accomplished through partnerships and collaborations, is the renovation of a dilapidated six-story furniture store on the city’s Eastside. Once marked for demolition, the century-old Aaron’s building, through collaborations and an investment by Tuffy Shallenberger, has since been transformed to its original glory as a kind of conference center, she said.

“We were in the process of raising funds to demolish it and looking into trying to come up with federal money. It was going to cost the city in excess of $200,000 to tear it down,” Grubach added.”It’s now a catalyst for this town. It’s one of those, ‘If you build it, they will come’ stories. People go inside and they can’t believe how it’s been restored. Tuffy cares about investing in Connellsville.”

Johnson Matthey invests in community

BY ERIN HAYES
For the Herald-Standard

Sustainability is a key ingredient in what Johnson Matthey is all about.

A global corporation that employs 13,000 people in 30 countries, the United Kingdom-based industry develops advanced materials and technologies to optimize the use of natural resources and enhance the quality of life for the people around the world.

But the corporation invests at the local level, as well, with a strong focus on strengthening a “talent pipeline” to ensure that enough talent is readily available to carry the corporation’s mission into the future.

“As a corporation, we have a social responsibility to give back to the community,” said Corbin Kearns, plant manager of the company’s Smithfield-based operation constructed in 2008 to manufacture a coating for heavy-duty emission-control catalysts designed to limit the amount of pollution entering the atmosphere from freight trucks.

“We’ve looked at how we can do this and felt it was important to us because of the number of people we employ to have a strong talent pipeline for future talent, especially in the STEM field,” Kearns said during a recent interview at the plant, which employs 140 locals.

STEM is an acronym that refers to the disciplines of science, technology, engineering and mathematics, typically used when addressing education policy and curriculum choices in schools to improve competitiveness in science and technology development.

“The CFFC is our partner; they help us administer the grant making program,” Kearns said.

More recently, the local plant decided to start a scholarship fund for high school students by setting aside $20,000 in a replenishable pool to fund a scholarship program. This past summer, the corporation awarded $6,000 to four recipients from those funds through CFFC.

“This is another way to support our local kids,” Kearns said.

The corporation also has established a community investment policy, which allows all employees two days of paid leave each year for community or charity work, subject to approval. Such volunteer activities might include assisting in a soup kitchen or helping to spruce up local parks, he said. The company also matches employees’ fundraising efforts to agreed limits each year.

“As a global corporation, we support donations to local organizations in our local communities and volunteer initiatives that we feel are important” Kearns said. “It’s nice to be able to show our employees, too, that they work for a company that cares about and gives back to the community workforce, especially in advanced manufacturing and information technology.

Mission Statement

“Believing that God calls us as people of faith to minister to those in need, the Interfaith Volunteer Caregivers of Fayette, Inc. will, through an interfaith network of trained volunteers, provide supportive services and outreach to meet the needs of the elderly.”

Income guidelines do not apply for 60+ individuals in need of home supportive services. A five day request is appreciated for the following services: medical and social transportation, grocery shopping, supportive visiting, telephone reassurance, minor home repairs, help with check writing/banking, transporting pets to the vet, referrals to other community services or agencies.

Office hours are Monday-Friday - 9am-4pm.
To register or request services, please call Carol Ashton at 724-438-0709.
